From the Pastor

Who's in Your Web of Relationships?

All of us have web of personal relationships that exists among our neighbors, coworkers, family members, and friends. But have you ever considered that your web of relationships did not happen by accident? Could it be that God orchestrated and intersected your life with these people for His purposes?

Let me encourage you to consider the people in your web of personal relationships at home, work, and play, and then to do three things:

1—Identify: Who are the unchurched or unbelieving people that you already know? A golfing buddy? Coworker? Neighborhood family? Fellow sports parents? A sales clerk you've gotten to know? If you will open your heart and eyes, I believe you will see that God has already brought unchurched people into your life naturally in the course of your work, leisure, and community involvement.

2—Invest: As a follower of Jesus, demonstrate a genuine concern and interest in the unchurched people that God has brought into your life. Take them to lunch; learn the names of their children; invite them into your life with authentic acts of friendships.

3—Invite: After you've demonstrated a genuine concern for them, offer a personal invitation for them to be your guest at First Baptist Church for worship or a special event. A personal invitation still ranks as one of the primary reasons a person will attend a church, so don't miss the opportunity to influence a life in this way.

A great "invite opportunity" is just around the corner. In just four weeks, we will have our FBC Family Night @ Splash 'N the Boro, and we've printed guest passes that you can use to invite the unchurched people and families that you know. Pick up a few passes today at the Welcome desk, and use them to invite a guest to the special night. Identify; Invest; and Invite—three simple steps that can make a huge difference.
